We wish our students to have a broad understanding of the Old World / New World dynamics marking Hispanic literatures and cultures. Students concentrating in Spanish will be required to take courses in both the Peninsular and Latin American areas that deal with literatures and cultures prior to the 1700s.

This concentration prepares students for a wide range of post-baccalaureate options. Given the international focus, our graduates will be prepared to enter graduate programs in any number of fields depending on their interests and other work done at the Honors College (e.g., Graduate programs in Spanish Literature, Cultural Studies, Latin American Studies, Education, Translation and Interpretation; Professional Schools: Law, International Business, International Relations). They may envision careers in sectors as diverse as education, law, human resource services, translation, court interpretation, business, diplomatic corps, banking, international organizations and NGOs, among others.

Available Options:

Concentration in Spanish

Minor concentration in Spanish Literature
