Course Description (Syllabus must be attached; Syllabus Checklist recommended; see Guidelines)
 This course is an examination of modern day slavery, or human trafficking. Humans have been bought and sold for thousands of years for various purposes, including domestic & manual labor, sexual exploitation, and other forms of bondage. In this course, students will learn about the types of human trafficking, who the offenders and victims are, the trauma experienced by victims, the national and global scope of the problem, & the role that governments, the criminal justice system, media & culture play in this issue.
