Subject: English Program Change for ENG 4932: Honors Seminar

The English Department offers ENG 4932: Honors Seminar (3 credits) during the fall semester as part of its two semester honors sequence. This course is required for Honors students but is open to students interested in more advanced literary study. The focus of Honors Seminar varies by year, with the most recent offerings focusing on multiethnic American literature (Fall 2016) and environmental literature. Currently, completing the two semester honors sequence (Honors Seminar and Honors Research) requires the use of 6 of 9 elective credits in the major. Many juniors invited to apply to the honors program have already completed their 9 elective credits and are therefore unable to participate in the program.

At the recommendation of the English Undergraduate Committee, the English Department approved the following change to our English major checklist, which will allow Honors Seminar, as with our Special Topics courses, to fulfill an appropriate category requirement based on its focus. Our current English major checklist reads: "AML 4930, ENL 4930, and LIT 4930 are Special Topics courses. Where they count is determined by the English Department." UC voted unanimously to include similar language for Honors Seminar on the checklist: "ENG 4932 may be used to fulfill the category determined by the department." The category decision for Honors Seminar will be made annually in consultation with the Honors Seminar professor.

This added flexibility will expand the opportunities for research to more of our majors and will aid our ability to recruit majors to the honors program.

Please find the English Major Checklist as supporting documentation and the necessary catalog changes below.
